

WPSU Adds a New “Tech Talk” Edition to “Pennsylvania Inside Out: Live”
The Live, Call-in Show Will Discuss New Technology

UNIVERSITY PARK, PA (January 27, 2006) – It's a high-tech world and a confusing one at best as new products and software upgrades are constantly introduced. Penn State Public Broadcasting premieres a new edition to the "Pennsylvania Inside Out" Tuesday live call-in program line-up called "Pennsylvania Inside Out: Tech Talk," on Tuesday Jan. 31 at 7 p.m. on WPSU-TV. This new addition to Talk Tuesday programs will offer discussion and advice surrounding new technologies and electronics.

Co-hosts Greg Petersen, WPSU TV/FM director of programming, and Jeff Luck, a Penn State systems design specialist, guide viewers and listeners through the ins and outs of the electronic frontier. The inaugural program examines digital photography. With digital cameras out-selling film, the choices are even more daunting. This live call-in will field questions and provide some helpful information on camera selection, composing shots, storing it all, and digital darkroom techniques. Guest is Greg Greico, professional photographer. The live call-in is simulcast on WPSU TV and FM radio and webcast on <http://wpsu.org/> and <http://live.psu.edu> online. Viewers and listeners can join the discussion by calling (800) 543-8242.

"Pennsylvania Inside Out: Live: Tech Talk" will be broadcast when there is a fifth Tuesday in a month. Other Talk Tuesday programs include "Pennsylvania Inside Out: Your Health" hosted by Kris Clark, "Pennsylvania Inside Out: What Matters" with Barbara Farmer, "Pennsylvania Inside Out: Live!" hosted by Patty Satalia and "To The Best Of My Knowledge" with Penn State President Graham Spanier.
